Mystery, Heartache Collide in The River, By Moonlight

Why would a young, wealthy artist commit suicide at the height of her career by jumping into the Hudson River? And if she was pushed, why didn't the accomplished swimmer survive? Author Camille Marchetta weaves an intriguing tale surrounding the puzzling death in her new novel, The River, By Moonlight.

In the days leading up to her funeral, her family and friends try to unravel the girl's secrets and cope with the consequences of her loss on their own lives. The River, By Moonlight is set near the end of World War I in New York City and the Hudson River Valley.

A former London literary agent, Camille Marchetta was also a writer and producer of such television series as Dallas and Dynasty. She is the author of the highly praised novels, Lovers and Friends, and The Wives of Frankie Ferraro, and has coauthored two fiction bestsellers with Ivana Trump. She lives in Westchester County, New York.
